

The Flag Of France

Why Does The French Tricolor Still Fly In Quebec?

Why does the French Tricolor fly in Quebec on many occasions in the Province of Quebec? This is a question that is constantly put to the writer by the information bureau clerks by United States and to French-Canadians.

Use of the French flag seems to have had many tourists to believe that the French-Canadian flag is a flag of some kind of political bond with France and occasionally put with the flag of establishing a "consensus" French republic on the banks of the St. Lawrence.

Nothing is further from the truth, which is briefly as follows: In 1842, a Swiss Protestant named Auguste proposed to the general assembly of the Grand Jean Baptiste district of Quebec that the Tricolor should be recognized as the flag of French-Canadian and the meeting was rejected. The French-Canadians would none of it.

Twelve years later, however, in 1854, the British Empire was celebrating on three different occasions the victories of Alma, Balaklava and Tchernaya—episodes of the Crimean War. The British flag, the Union Jack and the Tricolor were flown together, and the capital letters V, F and E, representing Victoria, France and England, were displayed along with the names of the battles. The British flag was not flown.

In 1855, the British Admiralty allowed the French warship "La Capricieuse," to penetrate the waters of the Saint Lawrence estuary as the port of Quebec. To welcome the ship, the French flag was flown, as well as the British flag, and it was noted that the French flag left over the Canadian flag.

That is how it comes about that the Union Jack and the French Republic introduced by the English is still seen in the Province of Quebec. It was originally a matter not of political but purely of policy. It is still a matter of policy, and it is still a matter of policy, and it is still a matter of policy.

Boys Lose Interest
British Anatomist Deplores Lack of Curiosity In Young Students

Students from British medical schools attract little interest in the study of anatomy, according to a British anatomist. He says that the students are not interested in the study of anatomy, and he says that the students are not interested in the study of anatomy.

An unidentified anatomist, writing in "The London Lancet" comments on the little interest in the study of anatomy, and he says that the students are not interested in the study of anatomy.

Just what has led to the partial extinction of this type I do not know. It may be the result of the "big-brother" often took up the study of anatomy, and he says that the students are not interested in the study of anatomy.

Goodwill Ships
British School Children To Visit Canada And U.S.

Plans for "goodwill ships" to visit Canada and the United States in 1940 have been announced by H. W. Butler, London schoolmaster and secretary of the British School Children's Association.

Mr. Butler will arrange for the reception of the ships at the American and Canadian ports of call. The ships will be named after the British School Children's Association.

The school children's association, founded 52 years ago, is a voluntary association of teachers and school children. It has a reputation for its educational visits for school children to various parts of Britain and the world.

The children are sent to school entirely from elementary and secondary schools. Almost 100,000 children take part annually in school journeys and last summer more than 12,000 went on trips abroad.

Culbers Of A Hike
You did happen to know that the culbers of a hike represent the distance between the main parts of a hike. You have a hike of 10 miles, and you have a hike of 10 miles.

Artillery shells go to sleep during the long, swift flight, says a scientist. But they have an unconscious mind of waking up at the end of the flight.

The students were carriage-bred, and they were very much interested in the study of anatomy, and he says that the students are not interested in the study of anatomy.
